

Health Education Resources Catalogue

June 2019

Keeping the public informed

The health education resources catalogue provides high-quality, easily understood information on a range of health topics, with a focus on preventative public health. Many resources are available in different languages, including Te Reo Māori and Pacific. All health education resources are free.

The HealthEd website

To view, go to www.healthed.govt.nz. You can read the resources online and download or print the PDF files from the HealthEd website. You can also order printed copies of many of the resources from the site. Please note that some resources are online only.

Additional information on policy advice and research relating to health and disability can be found on the Ministry of Health's main website www.health.govt.nz. Your health, is a section of the Ministry's website with more information on important health topics. The topics can be found at www.health.govt.nz/your-health.

Reprints and revisions

All the resources are regularly revised to reflect policy, clinical or legislation changes and to ensure they are accurate and up-to-date. The publication or revision date is included on each resource. For the print version, the publication date is usually at the bottom of the back page; for the online version, it's near the top of the page.

The Authorised Providers

Resource orders are managed by a network of District Health Board Authorised Providers (APs). The APs can provide additional information about resources and locally produced publications.

Availability of resources

The health education resources are provided free of charge to the public. For a few resources, limits may be applied to maintain fair distribution, or where they are targeted to a particular audience. A very few resources are restricted to health professionals, as indicated.

If you have a particular reason for requiring a large number of any resource, please let your local AP know. Please only order the number of resources you need to ensure they can remain available at no charge.
