

Chlamydia is New Zealand's most common sexually transmissible infection (STI). But most people who have it don't know they have it as there may be no symptoms.

EASY TO TEST. EASY TO TREAT.

If Chlamydia is left untreated it can cause serious health problems. Fortunately it only takes one simple test to find out if you have it. Antibiotics will cure it.

All health services are confidential. Services at sexual health clinics are free and may be free at other health centres/clinics – ask your doctor or nurse.

Your best protection is to use a condom. Always.

newzealand.govt.nz